About Cookout Restaurant: History & Popularity Overview

Cook Out began as a single burger spot in North Carolina and quietly became a Southern fast-food institution. It was founded in 1989 in Greensboro, North Carolina, by Morris Reaves. At the start, Cook Out focused on char-grilled food, low prices, and drive-thru convenience. Instead of franchising, the brand expanded through company-owned locations, often repurposing former restaurant buildings. By 2026, Cook Out operates over 360 locations across 10 (or more than) states, mainly in the Southeast and Mid-Atlantic, maintaining its original menu style, pricing philosophy, and late-night appeal.

Why CookOut Is Popular

Cook Out's popularity comes from a mix of value, speed, Southern comfort food, and a menu built for customization.

The Tray System

The Cook Out Tray anchors the menu by bundling one entrée, two sides, and a drink at a low price. Unlike typical combo meals, sides can be full menu items, creating unusually large meals without premium pricing.

Fresh, Char-Grilled Menu

Cook Out focuses on char-grilled hamburgers, pork barbecue, hot dogs, chicken sandwiches, and wraps. Burgers are cooked fresh, barbecue follows North Carolina traditions, and chicken items balance grilled and fried options.

Unique Side Options

Beyond fries, Cook Out offers hushpuppies, quesadillas, corn dogs, cheese bites, and onion rings. Many of these qualify as tray sides, which adds flexibility that most national chains do not allow.

Milkshake Variety

Cook Out's milkshake menu features over 40 core flavors with unlimited mix-ins. Seasonal options like Banana Pudding and Eggnog add regional appeal, while flat pricing keeps choices simple.

Drive-Thru Culture

Most locations prioritize double drive-thru lanes and walk-up windows, with minimal indoor seating. This setup supports fast service, late-night traffic, and high volume without sacrificing speed.

What Are People Saying: Prices of Menu at Cookout Review

Across platforms, Cook Out’s pricing sparks conversation because the amount of food often feels unreal for the cost.

Reddit

On Reddit, Cook Out is discussed as a value benchmark rather than just fast food. Trays around $7-$9 are considered massive compared to national chains, even acknowledging price increases over the years. The food quality is debated, but milkshakes are nearly untouchable in reputation. Users consistently emphasize tray customization, generous portions, and the ability to stack entrées as sides, which keeps Cook Out competitive despite inflation.

Quora

Quora discussions frame Cook Out as comfort food done cheaply and quickly. People highlight the sheer menu size, tray flexibility, and milkshake variety as standout strengths. New customers sometimes feel overwhelmed, and quality can vary by location, but most agree it delivers more food for less money than comparable chains. Pricing is repeatedly described as “under $10 for a full meal,” which drives repeat visits.

Social Media (TikTok, Instagram & YouTube)

On social media, Cook Out thrives on first-time reactions and drive-thru runs. Creators regularly order Cheddar Style double burger trays, Cajun fries, cheese bites, and stacked milkshakes like Oreo cheesecake or banana pudding. Videos highlight late-night accessibility, oversized portions, and unofficial “pro tips” like extra sauces. Cook Out’s own posts, including weekly features, keep the menu trending organically.
